

PREFACE

The lectionary which follows contains much that is old and much that is new, much that reflects the collective wisdom of the church universal, and much that flows from our particular spiritual insights as Moravians.

Since the earliest centuries, the Christian church has found it helpful to provide a selection of Scripture lessons or “pericopes” for use on the various Sundays and festivals of the church year. Realizing the benefits to be derived from such an orderly proclamation of God’s Word, our Moravian Church, along with other major denominations, thankfully adopted the “traditional lectionary” as a suggested guide for its own ministers and congregations.

God continues to work among his people, however, and beginning in 1969 many denominations introduced a “new lectionary,” similar in many respects to the “traditional pericopes,” but now embracing a three-year cycle of lessons with three selections and one Psalm for each Sunday or festival. The advantage of this development was immediately obvious, for a far larger selection of the riches of God’s Word could thereby be utilized for the instruction of the faithful. Various denominations made slight modifications in the basic lectionary in accord with their own heritage (Lutheran, Presbyterian, Episcopal, etc.), but the basic structure and, indeed, most of the individual selections remain the same. This approach has now been adopted by the Moravian Church.

The following adaptations have been made in the Revised Common Lectionary for this Moravian lectionary: Readings from the Apocrypha (deuterocanonical books) have not been used. Alternative readings have not been listed. Readings for the Season of Christmas, other than for Sundays and one set for Christmas Day, have been omitted! Readings for Holy Week and for the Easter Vigil have been omitted because these passages are part of the Moravian tradition of Holy Week readings. The gospel readings for Easter Sunday are from a different gospel in each cycle. In the Sundays after Pentecost, the set of Old Testament and Psalm readings related to the gospel readings has been used.

In accord with our long-standing Moravian tradition of freedom, use of this lectionary is, of course, not “required” as in some other denominations. It is, however, warmly commended to our ministers and congregations because of its many advantages. Reading from it at public worship on a continuing and regular basis will ensure that our people hear the Word of God in all its fullness. Our ministers, for their part, will be challenged to treat texts they might never have chosen on their own, but will also find an ever-increasing number of commentaries and “sermon helps” being published which are based on the three-year lectionary. In addition, with this lectionary the Moravian Church reaffirms once again its unity of Spirit with major portions of the church universal.

Let us hear the Word of God as it speaks to us as individuals and as the Unity of the faithful:

For whatever was written in former days was written for our instruction, so that by steadfastness and by the encouragement of the scriptures we might have hope. May the God of steadfastness and encouragement grant you to live in harmony with one another, in accordance with Christ Jesus, so that together you may with one voice glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.
Romans 15:4-6 (NRSV)

SEASONS OF THE YEAR

With Suggestions and Explanations of Parament Colors

THE SEASON OF ADVENT

Advent is a season of preparation for the coming of Christ. It has a threefold dimension: looking back to the coming of Christ in history; looking around and within to the coming of Christ in the present; and looking forward to the coming of Christ at the consummation of history. Advent begins with the Sunday closest to November 30, and extends through the four Sundays before Christmas, ending at Christmas Eve.

The traditional color for Advent is purple, the color of royalty in honor of the coming King. Purple is also the color of penitence, and reminds us that we are to examine our lives as we prepare to celebrate the coming of Christ. Blue, a color of hope is sometimes used for Advent to distinguish it from the more penitential season of Lent.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON

Christmas follows as the fulfillment of Advent. It is the celebration of the birth of Christ, and it is during these twelve days of Christmas festivals associated with Christ that Christmas hymns and decorations are appropriate.

The color of Christmas and its festivals is white, the color of purity.

THE EPIPHANY SEASON

Epiphany means “manifestation,” and the day of the Epiphany recalls the manifestation of Christ to the wise men, who represent the nations of the earth. The First Sunday after the Epiphany celebrates the baptism of Christ, the beginning of Christ’s manifestation of himself as Messiah in his public ministry. The variable number of Sundays after the Epiphany recalls this public ministry of Jesus, and the readings for the Last Sunday after the Epiphany (which are always to be used on the Sunday preceding Ash Wednesday) celebrate his transfiguration. This event, which shows the Lord in all his glory, is a fitting climax to the public ministry of Jesus. Coming just before the season of his passion, it looks forward to the glory of his resurrection.

The color for the Epiphany, as a festival of our Lord, is white. White is also used for the same reason on the First and Last Sundays after the Epiphany. Green, a color of growth and hope, is used on the other Sundays after the Epiphany.

THE SEASON OF LENT

Lent begins on Ash Wednesday and extends through the forty days (excluding Sundays) until Easter. It recalls the events leading up to his passion, and should be a time of self-examination as we consider our own unworthiness in the face of the Lord’s love displayed in his suffering and dying for us.

The color of Lent is purple, the color of penitence. If black is to be used in the church at all, it is most appropriate for Ash Wednesday, not only as a sign of the ashes of penitence, but also of the darkness of sin which must be illumined by the light of Christ. White may be used on Maundy Thursday, suggesting gladness for the institution of the Lord’s Supper, but the tone of the service on that day is best expressed by purple.

THE EASTER SEASON

Easter, the celebration of the Lord’s resurrection, is the greatest of the Christian festivals, and so is celebrated not for a day or a week, but for a “week of weeks.” This explains why the Sundays following Easter Day are called Sundays of Easter and not after Easter. As the season nears its close, we recall the ascension of Christ, which the Scriptures and the witness of the early church unite in seeing as the consummation of the Easter event. Where a service on Ascension Day itself is not possible, the reading may be used on the Seventh Sunday of Easter as a climax and summary of the season.

White, the color of joy and of the Lord, is used throughout Easter.

THE SEASON OF PENTECOST

Pentecost may also be seen as a culmination of Easter, for on that day the risen and ascended Savior fulfilled his promise to bestow the Spirit upon his church, thus equipping the church to carry out his command to “preach the gospel to all nations.” Since medieval times, the First Sunday after Pentecost has been celebrated as Trinity Sunday, the commemoration not so much of a doctrine as of the majesty and mystery of God. The remaining Sundays after the Pentecost might be called the “Season of the Church,” which extends from the time of the earthly ministry of Jesus to his coming at the end of time. The readings for this time deal with the life in Christ under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. The readings for the last Sunday in the liturgical year, called the Reign of Christ, look forward to the time when “the kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

Red, the color of the Spirit and of the fire of love, is used on the Day of Pentecost.

White is used for Trinity Sunday and for the Reign of Christ, which is a festival of our Lord.

Green, the color of growth, is used on the remaining Sundays as a symbol of our growth in the life of Christ.

The term proper refers simply to the variable lectionary readings. For the Sundays after Pentecost, the readings are determined by the date, not by the relationship to Pentecost. The Sundays after Pentecost will, however, still be numbered.

OTHER FESTIVALS AND MEMORIAL DAYS

It is also fitting the denomination remember dates in our history, not as a glorification of the past, but as a stimulus to the present. Such occasions (with appropriate colors) are:

March 1 .....	The Founding of the Unity .....	Red
July 6 .....	The Martyrdom of John Hus .....	Red
August 13 .....	The Spiritual Baptism of Renewed Unity .....	Red
August 21 .....	The Beginning of Moravian Missions.....	White
September 16.....	Ministers' Covenant Day .....	Red
October 31 .....	Reformation Day .....	Red
November 1 .....	All Saints' Day .....	White
November 13 .....	Christ the Chief Elder.....	White

Other days (National Occasions, Thanksgiving or Harvest Festivals, and New Year's Eve) may be celebrated in the church. These days should be seen as incorporated into the life in Christ, and so the color of the season should be used. Likewise, events within the life of an individual should be seen as a part of the life of the church, and therefore, the color of the season should not be changed for baptisms, weddings, and funerals.

Special events which may be seen as enriching the life of the whole church (not just the local congregation) may fittingly be noted with an appropriate color. Thus red may be used for ordinations and consecrations, synods, or the founding of a congregation. Red may be used on the anniversary of a congregation, in witness to its contribution to the life of the whole church of Christ. An event such as the installation of a pastor, however, is primarily a local occasion, and so the color of the season is most appropriate here.

CONCERNING THE PROPER COLOR FOR HOLY COMMUNION

Many of our churches use white for all communions to emphasize that this is the Lord's Supper. A similar reasoning, though, could be to maintain that white should be used on *all *Sundays, because every Sunday is in essence a celebration of the risen Lord. The choice is optional. To use the appropriate seasonal color at communions would serve to incorporate the specific celebration of the sacrament into the general framework of the Christian year.
